Brief description

A former boiler hall complex divided into two parts. The first part has 2 floors and was used to store fuel. The second part (with a chimney) has 3 floors. Potato store – a quarter of the building is used as an office building (3 floors). The remaining part of the building (2 floors) was used to store beer and later potatoes. The upper level was used as a granary. Most of the building has been damaged by damp. The buildings are located at a former brewery complex. Potential uses: in view of the flexible nature of the buildings, potential uses are almost unrestricted. Either it could be restored to its original function, or it could be used for a residential development or for civic amenities – e.g. cultural or sporting facilities – or as offices.
